He criticised severely the change from the specific to the ad valorem form of duties, on the ground that it would encourage undervaluation. "In the cotton schedule," he said, "the lowering of rates on fine goods is likely to work very much disaste: to mills that are engaged in the production of such work and in cotton-yarn mills.

'In the woolen schedules the rates are not only too low generally, but they are so un-even in their reduction that the lowering of wages will not by any possibility save some industries, so that the workingmen in parts of this country will not have the comparative good fortune to only have their This is true to some extent, as

severely treated in many ways. Our fish-ermen on the coast of Maine have been specially considered to their very great disdvantage in putting fresh fish on the free st without even the saving clause 'for immediate consumption.' Inasmuch as a great deal of fish is brought in on ice, this praclically opens our fresh fish market to the Canadians, who have obtained without dis-advantages of a treaty all that the former dministration of President Cleveland tried to give them by the rejected treaty.

ong other things that are admitted free is building stone, and cut stone is only 20 per cent ad valorem; that is, the labor on building stone is only balanced by a simple duty of 20 per cent, while it is to be hoped this country will wait long before it sees a proportionate decrease of the wages of the workingmen engaged in that occu-

"There are also many little devices throughout the bill for the purpose of achieving practical free trade indirectly. like that which declares that all articles for the use of the United States shall be free. While to the superficial observer it seems of very little consequence whether the government, under one department pays money into the other for duties on its imports or takes them without duties.

democratic party is earnestly and honestly ufacturers the sole bidders for government supplies. These are but few examples of the language and character of the bill which is presented for the consideration of the people. It is only possible for one who is only a member of the minority of the committee to speak in general terms upon the subject, but when the bill gets abroad and those who are interested bring to bear upon it their peculiar knowledge I think it will be found that it is as unsatisfactory as could well be imagined. What they have in store for us in the revenue bill it seems we are not to know, so that we cannot judge their scheme as a whole, but, judging from the sample which has been presented, it is an unfortunate one for the country." Destruction of American Industries. Mr. Burrows, who had not had an opportunity to study the bill as to details, said that an examination of the measure in a general way showed it to be extremely radical from end to end. He said that the enlargement of the free list would destroy industries which were now on the protected list, and in many cases duties were reduced to a point which would be destructive of American industries. "The bill will," he said, "bear with especial severity on the agricultural interests of the country by reason of the reduction of duties to such an extent as to admit foreign products, especially from Canada. Take my own state of Michigan, for instance. All our prominent industries either go on the free list or are so far reduced as to make their successful production impossible. Woolen, iron ore, copper, lumber, salt—five of our great industries—go on the free list absolutely, while the rates on our agricultural products are so reduced as to invite free competition from Canada.

"I do not see how the glass interests or the pottery interests can survive the cut made in this bill. I think the modifications in the woolen schedule will have the effect of closing up all the smaller mills in the country. I also notice that all agricultural implements are put on the free list, which will certainly cripple that industry in the United States, at a time, too, agricultural implements were never furnished so cheaply to the farmers as today. Free wool, of course, will destroy that industry in the United States. "One of the most serious phases in this bill is the change from specific to ad va-lorem duties, which prevails in the bill from its opening clause to its final para-graph. Nothing like it ever existed in any tariff bill, unless it be the Walker tariff if anything was needed to complete destruction to American industries which this bill will bring, it was only nec-essary to change from specific to ad va-lorem duties. I regard this feature of the lous features, for ad valorem duties have been condemned by the best writers of po-litical economy, and by the experience of tariff system of all nations."

Skeptical of Its Passage Editor Rosewater of the Omaha Bee, who new tariff bill. He said today:

"I believe the democrats will not really want to put that bill through, for they will be afraid to disturb existing industries, If we have half a chance the conditions of the country will improve, and the dem-ocrats would rather go into the presidential campaign with prosperous times in the country than in a period of depression in all industries

McKINLEY'S OBJECTIONS.

He is Opposed to the Ad Valorem Duties of the Wilson Bill.

Governor Wm. McKinley arrived a Cleveland, Ohio, last night on his way to East Liverpool, Ohio. The governor said he had not had an opportunity to give the new tariff bill careful study, and, indeed he had seen only the brief synopsis pub lished in evening papers. He was not therefore, prepared to go into a thorough discussion of the measure.

He considered the bill, as a whole, however. a very sweeping one including as it did, in the free list such important articles as coal. wood, iron ore, lumber and salt. The aver age rate of duty was also largely reduced 40 per cent.

The most radical change the governor had noted was the doing away entirely with specific duties and changing the plan of collection to ad valorem duties. The plan of ad valorem duties was one that had been condemned by all administrations.
Under it the duties were based on a valuation of goods made by the foreign seller, and this opportunity opened wide the door to the rankest kinds of frauds against this government. Henry Clay once said that if he could fix the valuation of goods duty could be made to please makers. Mr. Manning, Secretary of the Treasury under Cleveland's first administramakers. had made a careful review of the whole subject of collection of duties, which paper would make very interesting reading just now. Special Dispatch to The Evening Star. NEW YORK, Nov. 28.-The opening of today's stock market was irregular, with the industrials monopolizing the bulk of the but limited market for our securities, and foreign houses did nothing on this side. Sugar was sold down 5 per cent on sales by insiders, who are said to have put out a long line on the short side. This fact will Wilson, assisted by Rev. Dr. Hoyt of have as great an influence on the price of the stock as the tariff bill, because without continued depression it will be impossible to cover at a profit, and without the assistance of the parties in interest no upward movement is believed possible.

Distillers lost 21-4 per cent on rumors that the tax on imported spirits will be less than was originally expected by friends of property who were instrumental in holding up the price.
